Procurement Consultant case study

Consultants within a large UK procurement solutions company swamped under spreadsheets and emails were looking to automate and systemise manual processes. A group of their consultants piloted Pulse tools alongside their existing procurement platform.

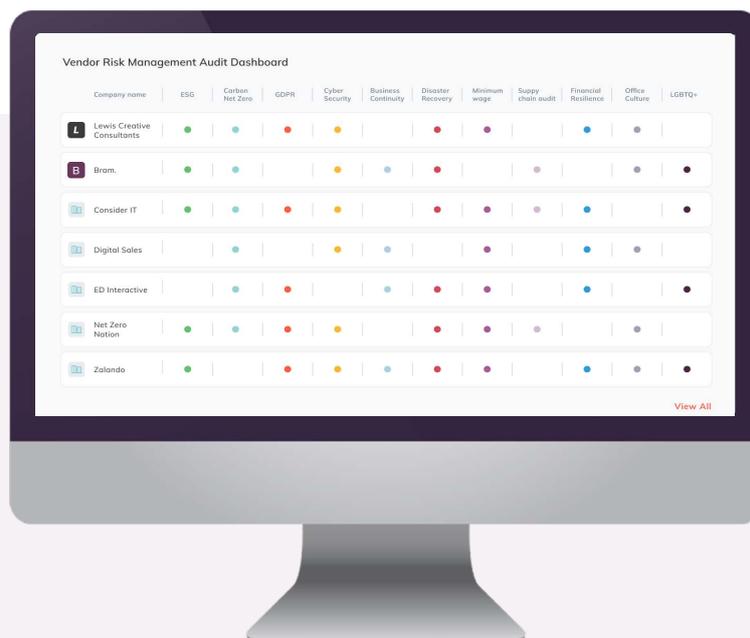

The RFx workflow tools were described as intuitive and easy to use and slashed time and effort spent on RFPs.

A member of the pilot group said they can run more RFx simultaneously so they no longer turn business down.

The pilot group all highlighted the side-by-side comparison feature was game changing – which was impossible before. The consultants also experienced increases supplier satisfaction as automatic questions speeded up the time required to respond.

When surveyed the consultants all agreed Pulse tools are now essential to achieving faster turnarounds and successful outcomes.

Pulse Market is currently being rolled out across the procurement company's team and even more of them are experiencing the efficiencies for themselves.

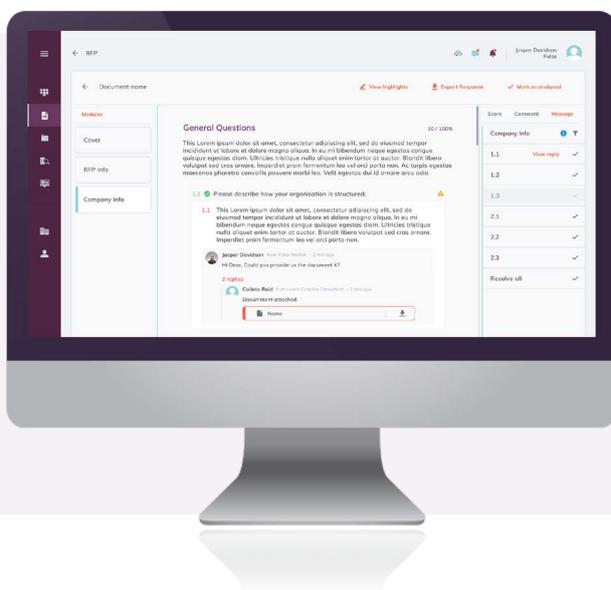

About Pulse

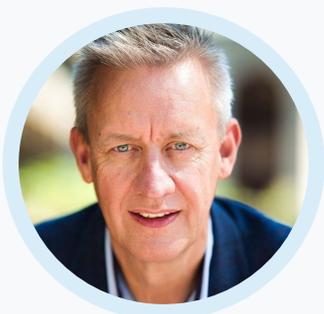

We're Pulse, a tech start-up shaking up the way companies buy goods and services. At Pulse, we're committed to procurement with purpose and helping businesses transition to a decarbonised and fairer economy.

Founded in 2021 we've developed an innovative digital platform that makes buying easy, collaborative and transparent. Say goodbye to spreadsheets and hello to streamlined workflows for better supplier relationships.

Our platform is designed to ensure best practice, due diligence excellence and efficiency in businesses with solutions that transform ethical purchasing for superior supply chain management.

We work with procurement professionals, businesses and sustainable consultants to bring about collaboration and a community equipped with technology and ESG knowledge to deliver a positive impact. Not only because it's the right thing to do, but also it makes good business sense.

“It was such an eye opener for me because what I realized was that as an SME, we didn't really manage our suppliers”

Russel Dalgleish,
Chairman of Scottish Business Network
